

We are seeking experienced health IT freelance journalists to write regular feature articles for iHealthBeat.

iHealthBeat is a widely read daily news digest reporting on technology's impact on health care. The online publication is funded by the California HealthCare Foundation and produced by the Advisory Board Company.

Feature articles cover a range of topics, from health IT policy to electronic health record adoption to mobile health (find out more through the iHealthBeat Feature Archive: <http://www.ihealthbeat.org/features-archive.aspx>). Feature articles are typically about 1,000 words and include at least three interviews with health IT experts. Freelancers are paid per article.

Qualified freelancers have:

- Demonstrated writing and editing experience for online publications
- Experience writing about health IT and other health care issues
- Proven to be organized, proactive and deadline driven
- The ability to easily adapt to different news styles

To be considered, please send the following information to ihb@chcf.org with "iHealthBeat Freelance Job Applicant" in the subject line:

- Resume
- 2-3 examples of health IT-related writing
- 2 references
- A story idea for an iHealthBeat feature article
- Experience/preference for health IT-related beat (ex: mobile health, telemedicine, etc.)